As Robin Skone-Palmer approached the mansion on Rockingham Avenue one hot September afternoon, she didn't know what to expect.

"Ask for Phyllis Diller," the employment agent had said.

Curious as much as nervous, Robin studied the beautiful house. Three-and-a-half hours later, she walked away wondering if she'd just stepped into Alice's Wonderland.

Plane travel, foreign countries, celebrities, and television studios became part of everyday life—from This Is Tom Jones in London to the Glass Festival in Elwood, Indiana.

They shared raucous laughter, mind-numbing boredom, and occasionally absolute terror. The work relationship became a friendship that lasted to the day of Phyllis's death at that same Rockingham mansion in Brentwood.

Join Robin beyond the spotlight, on the road with Phyllis Diller.

Praise for the Book

Robin Skone-Palmer has written a book—it is FABULOUS!

—Phyllis Diller

I laughed a lot. What a wonderful, insightful, bright observation of a another time and place. You are kind and fair.

—Perry Diller

About the Author

Robin Skone-Palmer lives in Las Vegas with her two cats. She divides her time between golf, pottery, and teaching after-school Bible clubs. She also collects wine—at least long enough to chill it before she pulls the cork.
